

The Club and The Sisterhood

[Original.]

"Young ladies," said the head of the sisterhood, an organization within the Episcopal church, "we are at our wits' end. Our quarters are at a loss for funds for building, and there is no suitable house to be had."

"I move," said Sister Florence Linn, "that a committee of three be appointed with power to secure quarters by some ordinary woman's method."

"What do you mean?" asked the president, "by ordinary woman's method?"

"By hook or by crook."

The explanation being deemed satisfactory, the motion was put and carried. The president appointed Sister Florence Linn, chairman, and Sisters Sapp Prichard and Genevieve Seronde. Miss Linn was a tall brunette, with a superb figure and snapping black eyes. Miss Prichard was fair, with brown eyes and Titian hair. Miss Seronde was a languishing blue-eyed blonde. The meeting adjourned, and the committee remained for consultation.

"I have a proposition to make," said the chairman. "You know the octagon house up on the hill? Well, it is just what we want."

"We are too late for that property," interrupted Miss Prichard. "It has been taken for a man's club."

"On the contrary, the club is too late. I had some talk with the owner about leasing his building to us."

"How long ago?"

"I think it was a year ago this summer. They say a verbal lease is as good as a written one."

"Did you agree to take the house?"

"I am quite sure I said something about taking it."

"Beavo!" exclaimed the other members of the committee, clapping their hands. "We'll claim it by law."

"And nine points of the law are possession," said the president triumphantly.

"Very well," said Miss Seronde in her soft voice, "let's go to the octagon house and—"

"Settle," supplied Miss Prichard.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon the house committee of the Calumet club, consisting of Messrs. Bob Curtis, Jack Brewster and Howard Merritt, were in the new clubhouse consulting the law. They should, according to the constitution, have walked the three young ladies. On seeing the men strolling about with their hats on Misses Prichard and Seronde shrank back, each with a faint shriek. Miss Linn advanced imperiously.

The men's hats came off one by one.

"May I ask," said Miss Linn, "what you are doing here?"

"We are preparing the building for the occupancy of the Calumet club."

"Then you are having your pains for nothing. This building is leased to our sisterhood."

The men looked at each other and smiled as if greatly amused. The girls knew they had a lease duly signed, sealed and witnessed. The girls said no more, but sweeping by the intruders as though worthy of no consideration, they passed to the rear of the building. The men could hear them consulting as to how they would arrange matters as they had just been doing themselves. At last the girls reappeared in the hall, and as they did so a bevy of scrubwomen came in.

"Sorry to trouble you, gentlemen," said the chairman, "but we must ask you to vacate. Our house cleaning is to begin."

"You are fortunate, ladies," replied Mr. Curtis, bowing very low. "We have had the house cleaned for you."

The girls looked at each other and smiled sarcastically. "Look at the windows," said Miss Prichard in a stage whisper. "And the stairs," from Miss Seronde in a musical voice. At the same time she threw up a pair of shapely arms and raised her blue eyes to the ceiling.

Leaving the two girls to wither the men with their contemptuous remarks, the chairman, Miss Linn, proceeded to distribute the scrubwomen in the different rooms. Mr. Curtis went to her and politely asked to see a copy of the sisterhood's lease. He was informed that they held a verbal lease. When he asked for the date she turned upon him impatiently and said:

"We are in possession of these premises; you are intruders. If you continue such ungentlemanly conduct we shall sue you for trespass."

The next morning the Chronicle published an item mentioning the fact of there being two claimants for the octagon house and expressing a hope that the sisterhood would win. The building would be of far more credit to the place as a home for married girls than for roystering men. It was to be hoped that the club would not stand in the way of the sisterhood.

Since both parties could not occupy the same house, the men proposed a compromise. It was agreed that the matter should be left to the two committees that had once met. The club men were invited to meet the sisterhood committee at the home of Miss Linn. The girls were arrayed in their most becoming costumes and had a dining table set for the club committee. Miss Linn had apportioned off the men, taking Mr. Bob Curtis to herself. After a long term of conviviality, during which the girls made themselves as attractive as they knew how, the two committees proceeded to business. The men asked the girls to propose a compromise. Then Miss Linn, acting as spokesman, said:

"We propose as a compromise that you give up the house to us."

The clubmen looked at each other, then accepted the terms.
